Introduction

As health care staff (see definition on page 8) we work with people in their moments of greatest need. We witness the direct impact that social inequalities have on the health and wellbeing of the people we care for. We endeavour to provide responses that are personalised and effective, regardless of background, gender, age, culture, sexuality, or ethnicity. This sensitivity to personalisation is particularly relevant to adult safeguarding.

As health care staff it is important to recognise that abuse can be caused by employees. Health care staff can also experience abuse. Organisational policies and procedures must have appropriate processes to escalate and manage all concerns.

Health and social care is a changing landscape and increasingly necessitates the development of new ways of working. This document provides non-statutory guidance that acts as a point of reference for health care staff to identify and develop the knowledge, skills, competence, and behaviour in the safeguarding of adults at risk.

Education can occur through formal training, accredited programmes, non-accredited programmes, practice-based learning (including supervision and appraisal) and development opportunities that target not only professional, but local service needs.

Practitioners should also have access to safeguarding adult guidance produced by their individual professional bodies and professional regulators.

One of the most important principles of safeguarding is that it is everyone's responsibility. Each organisation and member of health care staff must do everything they can to ensure that adults at risk are protected from abuse, harm, and neglect.

This document has been designed to guide health care staff and the teams they work with to identify the competencies they need in order to support individuals to receive personalised and culturally sensitive safeguarding.

For health care staff, the framework competencies may be a useful tool for:

- developing and reviewing job/role descriptions
- assessing competence for different levels of practitioner
- developing personal goals
- performance appraisal.

Health care professionals may use this document to:

- identify the suggested current level of practice and role expectations/requirements within the specific care context
- identify and develop the knowledge and skills in aspects of safeguarding to realise the potential of their role.

Health care providers have a responsibility to ensure staff are provided with training that builds on staff knowledge, ensuring they can evidence learning from incidents, meeting the needs of the organisation and the individuals it supports, as set out in its training needs analysis. Providers are encouraged to refer to this guidance when commissioning, developing and delivering safeguarding training. It is understood that providers can deviate from the guidance, but that deviations should be agreed by those accountable within the organisation.

This guidance suggests training requirements and there may be national or local employment or regulator arrangements that pose additional requirements. It is not intended to replace contractual arrangements between commissioners and providers or NHS organisations and their employees. Some employers may require certain staff groups to be trained to a differing level than suggested to better fulfil their organisational intent and purpose.

It is an ambitious document which will develop further over the coming years to encompass a lifespan approach to safeguarding. It is expected that all healthcare staff will be trained to an appropriate level, as identified by safeguarding professionals within that area. This document seeks to build on existing standards and secure safeguarding training as the golden thread which runs through every element of care delivery.

The education and training principles are set out, highlighting flexible learning opportunities to enable acquisition and maintenance of knowledge and skills. It is acknowledged that many health practitioners will need equivalent child and young person's safeguarding training and that there are many areas of overlap. This can be taken into consideration when developing, delivering, and documenting the training undertaken. It is anticipated that providers will often combine safeguarding adults, children and young people training and the future life-course approach will further support this approach.

Scope of the document

This updated publication is intended to have relevance to all health and social care staff. It is designed to be used in all organisations that provide or commission health care for adults regardless of sector, setting or size. It is also designed to be used by all services who are commissioned to work directly with children but need also to be competent working with adults. The language reflects the different legislation, terms, and structures within the four UK countries within which intercollegiate colleagues practice.

All NHS and Independent health providers are required under statute and regulation to have effective arrangements in place to safeguard and promote the welfare of children and adults at risk of harm and abuse in every service that they deliver. Safeguarding should be embedded at every level in every organisation with effective governance processes evident. Organisations providing or commissioning health care for adults must assure themselves and their regulators that safeguarding arrangements are robust and are working.

Key features of the document

- Applies to people aged 18 and over.
- Recognises that often adults who are at risk of abuse are living in communities and/or families who have additional risk factors which need to be considered and, where necessary, addressed.
- Suggests the minimum standards and competencies required to support adult safeguarding including mental capacity and deprivation of liberty legislation* appropriate to country of practice. It focuses on the knowledge, skills and behaviour required.
- Sets out a framework that will help staff, practitioners, employers, and commissioners understand the role and level of education, competence, and awareness of systems which correlates to their level of contact and involvement with adults at risk.

To ensure adults receive proactive and high-quality safeguarding it is important that health care staff are familiar with the relevant associated legislation and guidance that supports adults to make decisions. Such legislation and guidance may be specific to the country in which the professional practices and the competencies must be applied within the context of that legislation.

Health care organisations must ensure that people who use their services are safeguarded, and that staff are suitably skilled and supported to facilitate this.

All health care organisations have a duty outlined in legislation to make arrangements to safeguard and to co-operate with other agencies to protect adults at risk from harm, abuse or neglect. Chief executive officers have a responsibility to seek assurance that all staff are able to meet this requirement.

In addition to safeguarding training, it is also essential that staff have training on a range of other inter-related subjects such as confidentiality, data protection and mental capacity legislation (appropriate to their role and country of practice) to effectively respond to the safeguarding needs of adults. Training in these inter-related subjects may be used to meet the outcomes in this guidance and that safeguarding learning may feature in these wider learning opportunities.

* In Wales, staff should also be mindful of the National Safeguarding Training, Learning and Development Standards <https://socialcare.wales/resources-guidance/safeguarding-list/national-safeguarding-training-learning-and-development-standards/safeguarding-standards-about>. This document is not a comprehensive list of mental capacity and deprivation of liberty practice competencies. The National Mental Capacity Act Competency Framework (Bournemouth.ac.uk) and the NICE guidance for decision making and mental capacity are recommended resources for this area of practice.

Key definitions

In the context of this document the terms used are defined as follows:

Health care staff

'Staff' includes all health and social care staff who work or volunteer with adults who may be at risk of abuse. The term staff refers to all people performing a role in a health and social care context. This includes employees, private/independent contractors (including agency staff) or practitioners and volunteers.

Adult

An individual who is 18 years of age or over.

Adult at risk

An adult at risk is any person who is aged 18 years or over and at risk of abuse, harm or neglect because of their needs for care and/or support and are unable to safeguard themselves.

Adult safeguarding

To work with an individual to protect their right to live in safety, free from abuse, harm, and neglect. This can include both proactive and reactive interventions to support health and wellbeing with the engagement of the individual and their wider community. The aim is to enable the individual to live free from fear and harm and have their rights and choices respected.

Case reviews

Definition of 'case review'
For consistency and brevity, the term 'case review' is used throughout this document and applies to a range of multidisciplinary adult safeguarding statutory processes. The list below is not exhaustive and there may be local and regional variations.
Country	Example of terms used
England	Safeguarding adults reviews Safeguarding adults board meeting Section 42 enquiry LeDeR – Learning from Lives and Deaths: People with a learning disability and autistic people Domestic homicide review
Wales	Regional safeguarding board meeting National independent safeguarding board meeting Adult practice reviews Adult protection strategy meeting Adult protection conference Domestic homicide review Mental health homicide review Single unified safeguarding review
Scotland	Serious case review Learning review and audit Significant case review
Northern Ireland	Northern Ireland Adult Safeguarding Partnership Case management review Public protection arrangements Serious case review

Competence

The ability to perform a specific task, action or function successfully. It is a combination of skills, knowledge and experience expected of individual staff and being able to demonstrate the ability to be critically reflective and self-aware as you analyse, review and evaluate your skills, knowledge and professional practice, exploring alternative approaches and being open to change (Bournemouth University, 2015).

Designated professional

The term designated professional denotes experts and strategic safeguarding professionals working only within commissioning, integrated care systems (ICSs), and local health boards. In Wales, all designated professionals are based within Public Health Wales and have a national strategic role and not an assurance role. These statutory roles have specific responsibilities for adult safeguarding, including the provision of strategic advice and guidance to organisational boards across the health and social care community (SAAF 2022).

Forensic

The term forensic refers to clinical tests or techniques used in relation to recording or collecting/preserving material that may be used in court as evidence to establish if a crime has taken place. It is important to state that a forensic test may not necessarily be recognised as such at the time of examination. Practitioners should be aware that routine tests may later become part of forensic evidence/safeguarding procedures and investigations.

Examples include:

- the need to preserve evidence by not touching, cleaning or removing anything that might contribute to an investigation of a potential crime scene
- detailing injuries and recording what is said by an individual.

Head of Safeguarding

They provide robust leadership, taking accountability for the organisational safeguarding portfolio. They are responsible and accountable for developing, implementing, and evaluating the delivery of safeguarding governance, assurance and that regulatory standards are maintained to the agreed level throughout the organisation. In so doing they will ensure the organisation is compliant and meets the requirements identified in legislation, not limited to the Care Act 2014, Domestic Abuse Act 2021, Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014, Violence against Women, Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence (Wales) Act 2015, Human Rights Act 1998 and Serious Crime Act 2015, Counter Terrorism Act 2015 and Health and Care Act 2022 and Prevent duty.

Legislation

Specific legislation relevant to adult safeguarding process can be found in Appendix 1 on page 58. The Safeguarding Accountability and Assurance Framework contains a list in section 3 and the legal framework for adult safeguarding practice can be found at england.nhs.uk/wp-content/uploads/2015/07/B0818_Safeguarding-children-young-people-and-adults-at-risk-in-the-NHS-Safeguarding-accountability-and-assuran.pdf

Mental Capacity Act legislation

The term capacity legislation refers to the relevant legislation within the UK countries notably

- Mental Capacity Act 2005 Amended 2019 (England and Wales) which applies from age 16.
- Adults with Incapacity (Scotland) 2000 which applies from age 16.
- Mental Capacity Act (Northern Ireland) 2016 which applies from age 16.

Mental Capacity Act (MCA) Lead

All NHS providers, commissioned providers and integrated care boards (ICBs) are required to have an MCA lead. This role is responsible for providing support and advice to clinicians in individual cases, and supervision for staff in areas where these issues may be particularly prevalent and/or complex, including the Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS) legislation under the MCA. They should also have a role in highlighting the extent to which their own organisation is compliant with the MCA.

Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS)

This is legislation used to keep people at risk of abuse safe. DoLS form part of the Mental Capacity Act (2005). It is a lawful process for authorisation of a deprivation of liberty for people in registered care homes or hospitals. The Supreme Court judgement 2014 in the case of Cheshire West clarified the acid test for what constitutes a deprivation of liberty. It states that an individual is deprived of their liberty for the purposes of Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights if they:

- lack the capacity to consent to their care/treatment arrangements
- are under continuous supervision and control
- are not free to leave.

A deprivation of liberty for such a person must be authorised in accordance with a legal process such as the Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS – part of the MCA), the Mental Health Act 1983 (MHA) or by the Court of Protection. A deprivation of liberty can occur in any setting including community and domestic settings where the state is responsible for imposing such arrangements. This will include a placement in a supported living arrangement (Department of Health, 2015).

Named GP and equivalent UK medical role

This is the GP or equivalent employed by the local health care organisation/ICB/health board to support them in carrying out their statutory duties and responsibilities for safeguarding. Activities are likely to include: providing teaching and training to primary care staff; supporting practice safeguarding leads; and working alongside other adult safeguarding professionals. There is no named GP or equivalent role in Wales.

Named professional, Safeguarding lead (and equivalent roles)

All providers of NHS funded health services including NHS trusts, NHS foundation trusts, health boards and public sector, voluntary sector, independent sector and social enterprises should identify a named professional for safeguarding within its structure. Named professionals have a key role in promoting good professional practice within their organisation, providing advice and expertise for fellow professionals, and ensuring safeguarding training is in place.

NOTE: Safeguarding lead (and equivalent roles) are titles often used in the Independent and third sector and are usually service level instead of provider level (or regional/national). Providers have a responsibility to ensure these are trained to a sufficient level to support staff. It is recognised this may not be level 4 as suggested in the document where they are supported by more senior dedicated safeguarding roles. As with any deviation from this guidance, this should be understood and agreed by those accountable within the organisation.

Person in Position of Trust (PiPoT)

The Care Act (2014) defines people in positions of trust (PiPoT) as ‘people who work in paid or unpaid capacity, including celebrities and people undertaking charitable duties with adults with care and support needs.’ (Department of Health, 2014, 14.120 to 14.132)

People can be in a position of trust:

- where they are likely to have contact with adults at risk of abuse and harm (Care Act 2014) as part of their employment or voluntary work
- where the role carries an expectation of trust
- where the person in trust can exercise authority, power or control over an adult(s) at risk (as perceived by the adult at risk)

In Wales, the Social Services and Well-Being (Wales) Act 2014 Working Together to Safeguard People, has a similar description of people in positions of trust.

Safeguarding principles

There are 6 principles which underpin adult safeguarding and apply to all sectors and settings. The principles should inform the ways in which professionals engage with people at risk of abuse, harm or neglect. Please refer to: <https://safeguarding.wales/en/adu-i/adu-i-a1/a1-p4> for principles in Wales.

- Empowerment – Personalisation and the presumption of person-led decisions and informed consent. “I am asked what I want as the outcomes from the safeguarding process and these directly inform what happens.”
- Prevention – It is better to act before harm occurs. “I receive clear and simple information about what abuse is, how to recognise the signs and what I can do to seek help.”
- Proportionality – Proportionate and least intrusive response appropriate to the risk presented. “I am sure that the professionals will work for my best interests, as I see them, and they will only get involved as much as needed.”
- Protection – Support and representation for those in greatest need. “I get help and support to report abuse. I get help to take part in the safeguarding process to the extent to which I want and to which I am able.”
- Partnership – Local solutions through services working with their communities. Communities have a part to play in preventing, identifying and reporting neglect and abuse. “I know that staff treat any personal and sensitive information in confidence, only sharing what is helpful and necessary. I am confident that professionals will work together to get the best result for me.”
- Accountability – Accountability and transparency in delivering safeguarding. “I understand the role of everyone involved in my life.”

The aims of making safeguarding personal

- A personalised approach that enables safeguarding to be done with, not to, people.
- To work with the person to set safeguarding outcomes which have meaning to them.
- Practice that focuses on achieving meaningful improvement to people’s circumstances rather than just an ‘investigation’ and ‘conclusion’.
- To prevent harm and reduce the risk of abuse or neglect to adults with care and support needs.
- To safeguard individuals in a way that supports them in making choices and having control in how they choose to live their lives.
- To promote an outcomes-based approach in safeguarding that works for people resulting in the best experience possible.
- To raise public awareness so that professionals, other staff and communities as a whole play their part in preventing, identifying and responding to abuse, harm or neglect.

(ADASS, 2018)

Types of abuse, harm and neglect

Abuse and neglect can take many forms. Organisations and individuals should not be constrained in their view of what constitutes abuse, neglect or harm and should always consider the circumstances on a person-centred basis. In most cases more than one type of abuse is present and this needs to be considered. Abuse can occur in person, face to face, or remotely using non-contact forms of abuse, such as via telephone or online.

Physical abuse

Assault, hitting, kicking, slapping, punching, pushing, misuse of medication, burns, dog bites, delay in seeking medical help, inappropriate restraint or inappropriate physical sanctions. Also consider bruising in non-mobile adults and adults who are under constant supervision with no care plan or explanation.

Sexual abuse

Contact sexual abuse includes rape and sexual assault, sexual harassment or sexual acts to which the adult has not consented or was pressured into.

Non-contact sexual abuse such as indecent exposure, online abuse, exposure to pornographic activities, harassment, grooming.

It is important to recognise that sexual exploitation is a form of sexual abuse and is not limited to children and young people.

Psychological and/or emotional abuse

Threats of harm or abandonment, deprivation of contact, humiliation, blaming, controlling, intimidation, coercion, gaslighting, harassment, verbal abuse, bullying, isolation or unreasonable and unjustified withdrawal of services or supportive networks.

Financial or material abuse

Theft, fraud and financial or material exploitation, coercion in relation to an adult's financial affairs or arrangements, including pressure in connection with wills, property, inheritance or financial transactions, or the misuse or misappropriation of property, possessions, or benefits. This can include home invasion (formerly known as 'cuckooing') where a person's property is taken over and used for illegal activities.

Neglect and acts of omission

Wilfully ignoring medical or physical care needs; failure to provide access to appropriate health and social care, such as not supporting a person to access clinical appointments and support; deliberately withholding necessities of life, such as medication, adequate nutrition and heating; depriving a person of stimulation or company, adaptations, equipment or aids to communication.

Self-neglect

This covers a wide range of behaviour, including neglecting to care for one's personal hygiene, health or surroundings, hoarding, and non-attendance at necessary health/dental appointments. Consideration must be given to the impact on other family members and/or the wider community, mental capacity legislation and whether this gives rise to a safeguarding concern.

Domestic abuse

Sections 1 to 3 of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 (the 2021 Act England and Wales) creates a statutory definition of domestic abuse, defining 'abusive behaviour' as any of the following:

- physical or sexual abuse (including non-fatal strangulation and non-fatal suffocation in England and Wales under the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 and in Northern Ireland under the Justice (Sexual Offences and Trafficking Victims) NI Act 2022)
- violent or threatening behaviour
- controlling or coercive behaviour
- harassment or stalking
- economic abuse
- psychological, emotional or other abuse
- technology-facilitated abuse
- abuse relating to faith and 'honour' based abuse.

For the definition to apply, both parties must be aged 16 or over and 'personally connected'.

'Personally connected' is defined in the act as parties who:

- are married to each other
- are civil partners of each other
- have agreed to marry one another (whether or not the agreement has been terminated)
- have entered into a civil partnership agreement (whether or not the agreement has been terminated)
- are or have been in an intimate personal relationship with each other
- have, or there has been a time when they each have had, a parental relationship in relation to the same child
- are relatives.

The offence of coercive and controlling behaviour in intimate and familial relationships was introduced into the Serious Crime Act (2015) and recognition of violence against women domestic abuse and sexual violence (VAWDASV) is part of the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014. Specific sub-types of domestic abuse may include but are not limited to: stalking, forced marriage (the Marriage and Civil Partnership (Minimum Age) Act 2022 means that in England and Wales 16- and 17-year-olds are no longer allowed to marry or enter a civil partnership, even if they have parental consent), coercive reproduction, faith-based abuse, and child to parent abuse. They may include all other forms of abuse, harm and neglect. Virginity testing and hymenoplasty are offences under the Health and Care Act 2022 and apply to all 4 UK nations.

Female genital mutilation (FGM)

FGM comprises all procedures involving partial or total removal of the external female genital organs or any other injury to the female genital organs for non-medical reasons. FGM is most often carried out on young girls aged between infancy and 15 years old but can happen to older girls and women. Some women may not realise they have had FGM until they come into contact with health services. Whilst there is a mandatory requirement to report incidents of FGM for children and young people under the age of 18 to the police in England and Wales, this is not a requirement for adult women. There is a referral pathway for pregnant women who have experienced FGM. If a professional has safeguarding concerns about an individual who is at risk of FGM a referral should be made in line with usual local safeguarding arrangements (GOV UK, 2012).

Discriminatory abuse

Unequal treatment based on age, disability, gender reassignment, marriage, and civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, race, religion and belief, sex or sexual orientation (known as 'protected characteristics') under the Equality Act (2010).

Organisational abuse

An incident or as a series of incidents involving on-going ill-treatment. It can be through neglect or from poor professional practice resulting from inadequate structure, policies, processes, and practices within an organisation. For example, it may range from isolated incidents to continuing ill-treatment in a care service or in relation to care provided in someone's own home.

Modern slavery

Adults who have other risk factors such as a learning disability, mental health illness, autism etc, may be at increased risk of modern slavery.

The Modern Slavery Act 2015 (England and Wales) Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Scotland) Act 2015 and the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Act (Northern Ireland) 2015 encompasses slavery, human trafficking, forced labour and domestic servitude. Traffickers and slave masters use whatever means they have at their disposal to coerce, deceive, and force individuals into a life of abuse, servitude, and inhumane treatment. Trafficking is the movement of people by means such as force, fraud, coercion, or deception with the aim of exploiting them. It is a form of modern slavery. People can be trafficked for many different forms of exploitation such as forced prostitution, forced labour, forced begging, and forced criminality, forced marriage, and domestic servitude, forced organ removal. Trafficking can occur within the UK as well as countries outside the UK.

Prevent

The Prevent Programme is designed to safeguard people in a similar way to safeguarding processes to protect people from gang activity, drug abuse, and physical and sexual abuse. The Counter Terrorism and Security Act 2015 introduced a duty on the NHS in England, Wales, and Scotland that in the exercise of their functions they must have due regard to the need to prevent people from being susceptible to being radicalised into terrorism. The Prevent Duty Guidance (2023) assists statutory partners across education, health, local authorities, police, and criminal justice agencies (prisons and probation) to understand how to comply with the Prevent Duty.

Health care staff will meet and treat people who may be being radicalised into terrorism. The health sector needs to ensure that health workers are able to identify early signs of an individual being radicalised in line with the Prevent framework. This type of abuse can affect anyone, and staff need to be cognisant of some of the overlapping processes such as mental health illness, social isolation and other things which can increase a person's risk of becoming radicalised.

This guidance encourages all staff to ensure they are in receipt of the appropriate competency training. Further details can be found in the Prevent Training and Competencies Framework: gov.uk/government/publications/nhs-prevent-training-and-competencies-framework

Mental capacity and deprivation of liberty

Understanding the legislation relevant to safeguarding is essential to core health care practice and competencies. Sufficient time is required to ensure that Mental Capacity Act competencies are met. Within a blended approach to learning, these competencies can be attained and developed from learning opportunities within other statutory and mandatory training provision, for example, consent to care and treatment. Mental capacity and deprivation of liberty training may be delivered as stand-alone training as well as being included in both child and adult safeguarding training. It is important that mental capacity and deprivation of liberty legislative competencies are included to enable staff to fulfil their roles. This document is not a comprehensive list of mental capacity and deprivation of liberty practice competencies.

We also recommend utilising the National Mental Capacity Act Competency Framework for Professional Health & Social Care Staff \(Qualified non specialist\) which includes ICB and LA commissioners and contract managers. The NICE guidance for decision-making and mental capacity are useful. Other resources include:

- Mental Capacity Toolkit
- Mental Capacity Act – elearning for healthcare \(e-lfh.org.uk\)

- Making decisions for someone else

Competency framework

This framework aims to reflect best practice in adult safeguarding, and sets out minimum training and education requirements for staff working at all levels with adults at risk of abuse.

Level 1: All staff working in health care settings.

Level 2: All staff working in health care who have regular contact with patients, their families or carers, or the public.

Level 3: All staff working in health care who are working with adults who are engaged in assessing, planning, delivering care and/or evaluating the needs of adults where there are safeguarding concerns (as appropriate to role). This includes commissioners.

Level 4: Specialist roles – named professionals, safeguarding leads (and equivalent roles directly advising staff on safeguarding).

Level 5: designated professionals from health boards.

Board level: Chief executive officers, trust and health board executive and non-executive directors/members, commissioning body directors. This includes boards of private, independent, and charitable health care and voluntary sector as well as statutory providers.

Staff groups are suggested at each level, but these are not exhaustive lists. It is recognised that there are a plethora of roles which are likely to increase over the coming years. The staff groups identified are examples of the types of role which correspond to the stated level. For further detailed information, practitioners may approach their individual colleges/professional bodies.

Please note: A number of the behaviours, knowledge, skills and competencies listed in the following tables are not applicable to all staff roles, services or organisations; it is therefore appropriate that each point is considered on an ‘as appropriate to role’ basis. The guidance is not statutory and health care providers have a responsibility to ensure that the duration and frequency of training (alongside the identified syllabus) is appropriate for the staff and the individuals they support.

The levels are not limited to suggested staff groups as noted above; organisations should ensure that training is allocated to staff based on level of contact and involvement with the individuals they support.

The allocation of staff to different levels and syllabus should be reviewed by accountable senior managers or the named professionals, safeguarding leads (and equivalent roles directly advising staff on safeguarding) for the service or organisation, and should be included in the training needs analysis.

To ensure learning translates into practice, adult safeguarding competences should be reviewed annually as part of staff appraisal in conjunction with individual learning and development plans and refresher training.

Education and training

This section outlines key issues related to acquiring and maintaining safeguarding knowledge and skills.

It is intended to support practice, education and training in all health care settings, sectors and countries.

It is intended to provide guidance for the suggested minimum indicative content and time required for practitioners to meet their safeguarding responsibilities. We would suggest that indicative content also supports specific local needs, and that scrutiny of local adult safeguarding data will also inform content and delivery. Provision for adult safeguarding training should be made within professionals' job plans/allocated training time.

In Northern Ireland this section should be read in conjunction with Northern Ireland Adult Safeguarding Partnership (2016) Training Strategy and Framework 2013 (Revised 2016) https://online.hscni.net/wpfd_file/adult-safeguarding-operational-procedures

In Wales National Safeguarding Training, Learning and Development Standards <https://socialcare.wales/resources-guidance/safeguarding-list/national-safeguarding-training-learning-and-development-standards/safeguarding-standards-about>

Underpinning principles

- Acquiring knowledge, skills and expertise in adult safeguarding, mental capacity and deprivation of liberty should be seen as a continuum. It is recognised that students and trainees will increase skill and competence throughout their career pathway.
- Training needs to be flexible, encompassing different learning styles and opportunities. The education, training and learning 'hours' stated at each level are therefore indicative, recognising that individual's learning styles and the roles they undertake vary considerably. Additionally, there is a need to recognise new and emerging safeguarding issues for which staff need to acquire additional knowledge and skills, as well as incorporating case precedence in mental capacity and deprivation of liberty.
- Inter professional and inter organisational training and education is encouraged in order to share best practice, learn from serious incidents and to develop professional networks, this should include both independent and voluntary sector health providers.
- Those leading and providing multidisciplinary and inter-agency training must demonstrate knowledge of the context of health participants' work. They should provide evidence to ensure the content is considered appropriate against the relevant level and delivered by a safeguarding practitioner (with current experience and access to provider level safeguarding leads for advice, guidance and supervision), who has qualifications and/or experience relevant to adult safeguarding and delivery of education and training. Training sessions should be tailored to the specific roles and needs of different professional groups at each level.

- The effectiveness of training programmes and learning opportunities should be regularly monitored. This can be done by evaluation forms, staff appraisals (encompassing a collaborative review of education, training and learning records), e-learning tests (following training and at regular intervals), and auditing implementation, as well as staff knowledge and understanding.
- Staff should receive refresher training every 3 years as a minimum and training should be tailored to the roles of individuals. Individuals should be encouraged to maintain their education, training and learning records to capture all education, training and learning opportunities to demonstrate acquisition and up to date knowledge, skills and competencies.
- E-learning is appropriate to impart knowledge at levels 1 and 2. E-learning can also be used at level 3 and above as preparation for reflective team-based (participatory) learning and to contribute to appraisals and revalidation when linked to case studies and changes in practice.
- While e-learning is important it should not be the only form of learning undertaken. It is expected that at least 50% of indicative education, training and learning time is of a participatory nature. This includes, for example, formal teaching/education, conference attendance and group case discussion.
- Education and training records will prevent the need to repeat learning when individuals move organisations, as they will be able to demonstrate up to date relevant competence, knowledge, and skills. The exception is where individuals have been working outside of the area of practice and the new role demands additional knowledge and skill, or individuals have had a career break.
- In addition to training programmes, named professionals should circulate written update briefings and literature, as appropriate, to all staff at least annually. These should include, for example, changes in legislation, changes in local policies and procedures, the risks associated with the internet and online social networking, or lessons from serious case reviews.
- Health care organisations must ensure all staff are able to access safeguarding support and expert advice, including expert advice in mental capacity and deprivation of liberty.
- The learning outcomes should describe what an individual should know, understand, or be able to do as a result of training and learning.
- It is recognised that many professionals also need equivalent child safeguarding/ protection education, training and learning.
- There are several aspects of safeguarding training and education that can apply equally to child and adult safeguarding/protection and that share the same principles. Examples of this may include, but are not limited to:
 - safeguarding ethos
 - confidentiality
 - information sharing
 - documentation
 - domestic abuse
 - mental capacity legislation for those age 16 and above.

- Education and training on these shared aspects may contribute to both child and adult safeguarding/protection requirements, where individuals are able to clearly demonstrate application within the reflective education, training and learning record. Those who are providing training on shared aspects should give equal value to children and adults within the training. Organisations using such opportunities for the integration of child and adult safeguarding should be able to demonstrate they have provided education, training and learning covering all elements of both adult and child safeguarding as outlined in the intercollegiate children and young people's document and the intercollegiate adult document, thereby enabling staff to demonstrate that they have acquired the relevant knowledge, skills, and competences. Organisations should also be able to provide evidence that equal value is given to both the adult and child content.
- Each level sets out the indicative content and time needed by practitioners. Maintaining and updating knowledge and skill should be a continuous and ongoing process. Regulatory and inspection bodies require evidence of completion of key refreshing and updating for revalidation and inspection purposes. Organisations can, if they wish, seek accreditation from a professional body (if available) for any programme of study from an externally contracted provider of safeguarding education and training where it explicitly states how any course or learning opportunity meets the required intercollegiate framework level. Employers must also give consideration to assessing learning and the long-term impact of education and training provided.
- Those providing adult safeguarding education and training should also consider the requirements of practitioner's regulatory bodies where appropriate and legislative requirements for their locality/country.
- Ultimately, employing organisations are responsible for assuring that their employees have the knowledge, skills, and competence to undertake their roles in both prevention and response to adult safeguarding, mental capacity, and deprivation of liberty. Organisations must provide support such that learners can embed new knowledge and skills into their roles. They should be supported by appropriate clinical and/or managerial supervision and mentorship as required.
- Accessible records of formal training must be retained in an individual employee's personal file/organisational record. Portable education passports are encouraged in order that staff can move between organisations without having to be repeatedly retrained.
- Practitioners should be encouraged to reflect on safeguarding, mental capacity and deprivation of liberty practice and share best practice as part of their professional development, documenting their key learning and number of hours.
- Inter-professional and inter-organisational training and education is encouraged in order to share best practice, learn from serious incidents and to develop professional networks, this should include both independent and voluntary sector health providers. It is acknowledged that adult safeguarding training and education will draw on knowledge and skills from related professional and legal guidance, for example mental capacity legislation, confidentiality guidance and guidance for safeguarding children and young people. The inclusion of knowledge from other allied subjects is important but cannot replace the main focus of the training which must be on adult safeguarding guidance.

- As a principle, participatory adult safeguarding education and training at level 3 upwards should form no less 50% of the content. Levels 1 and 2 can be completed using e-learning platforms. In the absence of a national training passport across all sectors, arrangements should be developed to assess employee's prior skills, knowledge, and competence in order to use the training to best clinical effect.
- The delivery of high-quality safeguarding and practice that is compliant with the mental capacity legislation and human rights is an essential role for all organisations who deliver care. It is not an addition to clinical practice; it is an intrinsic facet of professional practice and is core business for all health care organisations.
- Training needs to be flexible, encompassing different learning styles and opportunities, where appropriate it should involve service users and multidisciplinary colleagues.
- Royal colleges/professional organisations must also play a part in providing advice and support, particularly where health care practitioners are raising concerns about their own organisations. This includes Freedom to Speak up processes.
- Health care practitioners should take part in clinical governance, including holding regular case discussions, critical event analysis, audit, adherence to national guidelines (NSF, NICE, SIGN), analysis of complaints and other patient feedback and systems of safeguarding supervision and/or peer review. There should be opportunity to share good practice both in preventative safeguarding and responses to safeguarding concerns, including practice in relation to mental capacity and deprivation of liberty.
- Governance structures should foster good cross sector/agency relations and open up learning and review events to both the voluntary and independent sector.
- Information about accredited training and education programmes can be found at: e-lfh.org.uk

Adult safeguarding staffing resource

Adult safeguarding is a core health care activity. In order to deliver high-quality preventative and proactive safeguarding and to respond to safeguarding issues, adequate staffing must be available.

Local scrutiny of safeguarding data, research and population should determine the levels of the required safeguarding practitioners.

As a minimum, the staffing resource for designated safeguarding role should be based on population or on NHS Digital safeguarding figures/levels of area deprivation/country specific formula. As guidance for ICBs in England, the ratio should not fall below 1:220,000 population in any commissioning footprint.

Named and designated professional roles should be substantive dedicated roles. The size and structure of safeguarding teams should reflect the size, acuity and population served by the organisation, ensuring staff receive timely and skilled support.

RCN quality assurance

Publication

This is an RCN practice guidance. Practice guidance are evidence-based consensus documents, used to guide decisions about appropriate care of an individual, family or population in a specific context.

Description

One of the most important principles of safeguarding is that it is everyone's responsibility. Health care staff frequently work with people in their moments of greatest need and can witness health and social inequalities which have a direct impact on the lives of people they care for. This updated intercollegiate document is designed to guide professionals and the teams they work with to identify the competencies they need in order to support individuals to receive personalised and culturally sensitive safeguarding. It sets out minimum training requirements along with education and training principles.
